The Third National Symposium on Research Methodology:

Writing a pertinent research paper for presentation and /or publication

April 24th, 2018

OVERVIEW

The task of preparing a presentation or writing a research paper and submitting it to a journal for publication is time consuming and usually a daunting task. Barriers such as lack of experience, poor writing habits or unfamiliarity with the requirements of academic journals are some of the reasons that hinder the production of adequate research papers. Devolping effective writing skills and having an understanding of the process and structure of a peer-reviewed publication are likely to increase postgraduates opportunities to have their manuscripts published.

Areas of the symposium

- Types of research paper for publication or presentation
- The characteristics of a research paper
- Process in writing a research paper
- Format, structure and content style of a research paper
- How to write the different parts of a research paper
- Language of the symposium: English and French

MY RESEARCH VISION

I am interested in all aspects of language use in social contexts, across time, space, and discourse communities. My investigations into the design and use of academic corpora and corpus-informed lexical reference tools are motivated by a desire to improve the effectiveness of scholarly communication, and to support international students and scholars.

BIOGRAPHY

Hilary Nesi is Professor in English Language at Coventry University. Her research activities largely concern corpus development and analysis, the discourse of English for academic purposes (EAP), and the design and use of dictionaries and reference tools for academic contexts. She publishes, presents papers, and supervises PhD students in all these areas. She was one of the developers of the business correspondence component of the JISC-funded BT e-Archive, and was principal investigator for the project to create the BASE corpus of British Academic Spoken English, and for the project to create the BAWE corpus: 'An Investigation of Genres of Assessed Writing in British Higher Education'. She is currently leading the development of the Engineering Lecture Corpus (ELC). Hilary also writes EAP teaching and learning materials: she led the development team for the EASE academic speaking and listening series, and the ESRC-funded 'Writing for a Purpose' project on the British Council 'Learn English' website.
