Abstract

Entreprise has become a fundamental part of contemporary society. Several plans and policies have been initiated to integrate and nurture a culture of entrepreneurship in higher education. The latter is thought to host the ideal population for the attainment of the objective, that is creating individuals who embody the entrepreneurial mindset. In EFL classes, however, this attempt seems quite challenging. Hence, this presentation aims at providing an overview of the entrepreneurial mindset as concept and traces its possible applications particularly in foreign language settings. A thorough review of the literature is provided along with real world models of the entrepreneurial mindset put into practice in EFL classes. Despite the challenges it presents, Entrepreneurial development offers promising opportunities for the students.
