The New Millennium and the fall of International Community Aspirations

Mourad TOUATI

Abstract

The New Millennium prophecies set forward by globalization avant-garde ideologists have designed a full humanitarian and fair world that would have a capacity to cater for all international community and that through mutual respect, equity, easy access to knowledge resources and information humanity would turn the page of the bleeding, discriminatory and insecure former millennium. However, the merciless drives of the west to reestablish and to innovate means of reordering and re-mapping the formerly colonized territories imposing harsh uncontrollable measures that have ensued uncalculated consequences leading to persistent cultural, cultural and digital insecurity that trapped the former colonized world in an unpredictable fate in addition to the traditional modes of insecurity they inherited formerly and failed to overcome.

Key words: globalization, digital insecurity, cultural insecurity
